

Well, anyway, we washed the dishes and planned to go to Quigley Park on Tuesday. He hasn't been. Says there may be an Intime Reunion in N.Y. in March, hopes you'll be there.

I'm just a bit uncertain about your plans and thoughts on the subject. I think it's a good idea to get into local planning sometime, but I don't know why it should be now. I wonder if those "nice" men in Denver aren't doing a swell bit of axe grinding to get a pretty darn good assistant. And furthermore, I am definitely sure that no matter where a woman's place is according to them, your place is not behind a typewriter. I think it's swell to know typing & shorthand, but exceedingly dangerous to let anybody else know you do, or you'll find your self doing little else. Let someone else take your notes, Miriam.

Secondly, if Washington sent you to Denver, it must have wanted something from you when you got back. Thirdly, Simmons is a horrible place to go even if it is at home - why not take that stuff at night in Wash and do something interesting in the daytime? Fourthly, if you want local planning, I'll bet you can get an interesting spot in a high position better via Washington than via Denver.

As to my plans - I will have a week's vacation from March 1-7, I'm pretty sure. Then two months more of B.H. Then I had thought of spending a month at Johns Hopkins, striking there to be near Washington to see how another clinic works. A family friend is professor of surgery there. Then Missouri and the Navy. Anchors weigh! by you
